Tourism demand has been positively affected by the technological advancements in tourism distribution and the emerging tourism products. At the same time, it seems that inequality among tourism destination development remains a significant issue. Managing destinations today is more essential than ever before, in order to mitigate the unbalanced tourism destination development. Digital applications and resource combinations should be wisely used by tourism destination managers and planners, in order to ensure sustainable tourism development taking also into account the changes in tourism consumption patterns.

Suggested topics:

- Digital Applications in Destination Management
- Sharing Economy's impact on destinations
- Destination Branding
- Managing special and alternative tourism forms in a destination
- Innovative tools for Destination Management
- Value co-creation in destinations
- Seasonality and peripherality issues in tourism
- Accessibility, tourism and social welfare
- Destination Management Organizations: Evaluation and Efficiency
